I guess you are hoping farmers are too busy farming to notice the continual assault on farmland. The fact is once houses are built on farmland it makes it much harder for neighbors to farm, and impossible for them to expand - forever. That must be why builders, realtors, and various and sundry politicians from the governor on down are the only ones who support these bills. I wonder - once all the farm land is covered with houses and people, will all those people be eating the cats and the dogs?
