A great idea which is way overdue. Actually would be nice to see some of these provisions on renovations done also, when they are extensive renovations. This stepless exterior can save on accidents for everyone, not just those who have accessibility issues. Reinforcing bathroom walls for future handrails another great idea for all. We can all benefit from these provisions. Consider that many times younger folks end up with a knee surgery, etc and these changes could help them too, even though just temporarily needed.
