

HOUSING ALLIANCE

March 3, 2021

House Committee on Business and Labor
Oregon State Legislature
900 Court Street NE
Salem, OR 97301

Dear Chair Holvey, Vice Chair Bonham, Vice-Chair Grayber, Members of the Committee:

I am writing to you today on behalf of the Oregon Housing Alliance to express our support for HB 2009, which would reinstate Oregon's residential foreclosure moratorium through September 1, 2021 and provide basic protection for homeowners at risk of foreclosure during COVID.

The Oregon Housing Alliance is a coalition of more than ninety organizations from all parts of the state. Our members have come together with the knowledge that housing opportunity is the foundation on which all of our success is built – individual success as students, parents, workers, and community members as well as the success of our communities. We represent a diverse set of voices including affordable housing developers, residents of affordable housing, local jurisdictions, and organizations working to meet basic needs in every corner of our state.

We believe that all Oregonians need a safe, stable, and affordable place to call home.

Prior to the COVID-19 pandemic, we knew that already, too many seniors, families, and people who experience disabilities were paying too much of their income towards their rent or mortgage, and were experiencing other forms of housing instability.

Since the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic, all of us have spent much more time in our homes. It has become the place where we work, learn, worship, and play. Home has always been essential, and this past year has showed us exactly how essential home is.

The pandemic has lifted up countless stories of people who are making extreme sacrifices to pay rent and remain in their homes. The latest Census Household Pulse Survey¹ data reports that: Twenty one percent (21%) of respondents reported being worried about being foreclosed upon within the next two months. Significant percentages regularly report using credit cards to meet basic needs, borrowing money from family or friends to meet basic needs, or selling belongings or spending down savings to meet basic needs.

Families of color have been particularly hard hit by COVID – both the impacts of job loss and the virus – due to systemic racism which has kept many in low wage jobs, or a legacy of environmental impacts which negatively affect their health. The last foreclosure crisis also negatively and disproportionately impacted families of color², who disproportionately received subprime loans, after controlling for income, credit score, and other factors. In addition, families of color in the last foreclosure crisis were more likely to lose their home and experience a greater loss of wealth than their white peers.

Recent research by public health experts³ also shows how housing instability can and will negatively impact our COVID cases in Oregon. The public health research was focused on evictions, as those protections for people in other states have been inconsistent, but the impact is similar: First, the threat of the loss of housing can increase stress, anxiety, and depression, thereby weakening people's immune systems. Families spend down savings and assets and put rent on credit cards in order to avoid losing their housing. When this becomes unsustainable or people run out of any assets, they may next turn to move in with family or friends. With COVID, this creates an overcrowded housing situation, and circumstances which can worsen the spread of the virus. Homelessness and housing instability exacerbate the spread of COVID.

Currently, the federal foreclosure moratorium⁴ passed as part of the CARES Act is providing protection to some (approximately 70%) Oregonians who may be unable to pay their mortgage during this time. This federal protection is currently in place through the end of March, 2021, and we hope it will be continued to provide forbearance and foreclosure protection to help people remain in their home.

We hear regular reports that homeowners are reporting trouble accessing accurate information from their lenders. In spite of our state and federal protections – and assurances from banks that they are assisting homeowners – foreclosure counselors working all across the state, with struggling homeowners regularly reporting that people are having trouble even reaching their servicer to ask for assistance. They continue to receive conflicting information, no clear direction, and inconsistency from servicers. Information varies based on what the homeowner knows to ask for and who their servicer is.

Passing HB 2009 could help to educate and inform homeowners, and ensure all Oregonians have access to the same protections. The federal foreclosure moratoriums simply delay the requirement that people pay mortgages due during the emergency period. HB 2009 does not release a homeowner from their requirement to pay, but requires moving payments to the end of the loan period. The bill would not preclude banks and homeowners from working out a different option, but would provide immediate and meaningful protections to homeowners.

HB 2009 would temporarily prevent the filing of foreclosures by lenders, and provide forbearance to allow homeowners to move missed payments to the end of their loan period. Homeowners who have lost work due to the pandemic will not be able to pay several months of mortgage payments at once, and moving the payments to the end of the loan period, including interest, means that banks and lenders will still receive payment, and homeowners will not lose their homes.

Renewing our moratorium would both protect 30% of Oregon homeowners who currently lack foreclosure protection, and would help to educate and inform homeowners, and help them access these protections.

In addition, HB 2009 would make a critical change to the Oregon Foreclosure Avoidance program. Currently, lenders who file fewer than 175 foreclosures in the previous calendar year are exempt from participation in the State's foreclosure mediation program. HB 2009 would reduce the exemption threshold to 30 foreclosure filings per year, and look back to 2019. Oregon Foreclosure Avoidance has been an incredible successful program that has given homeowners the ability to negotiate with their lender, and for homeowners who have accessed counseling, 70% have been able to reach an agreement with their lender, most to remain in their homes.

Many Oregonians remember all too well the last foreclosure crisis and the negative ripple effects felt by families, individuals, and communities. Stories in the news over the last two months have highlighted incredibly difficult stories reminiscent of the Great Recession: families selling cars, skipping meals, and making other sacrifices in order to pay their housing costs. Nobody should be kicked out of their home during a pandemic. It is critical that we make public policy decisions accordingly so that we protect people and help them keep their homes. Without a stable home, people will not be safe, nor will they be able to return to work and school. This is an urgent issue that requires urgent action by the Legislature.

We urge you to support of HB 2009, and ask that you pass this bill immediately to provide protection to homeowners. Thank you very much for your time, and for your service to our state.

Sincerely,

Alison McIntosh
