Landlords should not be allowed to have access to our banking or financial information. Many people do not use apps or online systems to pay Bills. This would be undue hardship not to mention the constant scams and identity theft that can happen.

Being able to pay your bills with a check is the way it has always been. If someone wishes to use online means that is their priority. However for those of us who do not want our landlords to have access to our personal information, you cannot expect us to offer up our banking numbers or routing numbers to a landlord.

Plus there are way to many landlords that would take advantage of this. Most of us don't get paid on the first of the month and if landlords pull the money prior to tenant being paid we would then have bank fees etc
